

Heather Sadkowski

Heather moved to Nova Scotia in 2014 to complete her Master of Social Work. She fell in love with the East Coast and decided to make it her home. Annapolis Royal holds a special place in her heart, as it's her husband Owen's home community. In 2020, they returned to Annapolis Royal to raise their family and have embraced the joys of rural living. Heather takes pride in her work, supporting rehabilitation services for Veterans and their families at Veterans Affairs Canada. She plans to use her knowledge of policy and governance to advocate on behalf of the residents of Annapolis Royal. As a mother with young kids, Heather understands the importance of services and programs that enhance the quality of life for families and community members. She plans to advocate for healthcare services in our area and be a voice for Annapolis Royal.
